

CUSTOMER INFORMATION

ALDI

profited from the forced labor
of political prisoners
in the former GDR!

They still dont take any responsibility!

#againstforcedlabor

UNION OF VICTIMS' ASSOCIATIONS OF
COMMUNIST TYRANNY

CUSTOMER INFORMATION

ALDI

profited from the
forced labor
of political prisoners
in the former GDR!

*They still dont take
any responsibility!*

#againstforcedlabor

UNION OF VICTIMS' ASSOCIATIONS OF
COMMUNIST TYRANNY

CUSTOMER INFORMATION

Before the fall of the inner-German border, ALDI imported products from Eastern Germany (GDR), some of which were manufactured by political prisoners under forced labor.

Millions of women's tights made their way from the „VEB Esda Thalheim“ production facility in the GDR women's prison Hoheneck to the ALDI supermarket shelves. They were sold in the budget segment under the names „Iris“ in northern and „Sayonara“ in southern Germany.

The women, often imprisoned for political reasons, worked under inhumane conditions.

ALDI has committed itself to fair working conditions and employee rights in its Code of Conduct. The company however wants nothing to do with the shadows of the past.

Despite solid evidence, ALDI is not willing to reach out to the victims of forced labor in GDR prisons.

This is a slap in the face to those who had to toil for the profits of the company. Does this meet ALDI's understanding of fairness and sustainability?

ALDI must confront its past
and reach out to the victims!

#againstforcedlabor

   uokgev  @uokgnews

more information at www.uokg.de

Copyright UOKG e.V. Ruschestr. 103 10365 Berlin

CUSTOMER INFORMATION

Before the fall of the inner-German border, ALDI imported products from Eastern Germany (GDR), some of which were manufactured by political prisoners under forced labor.

Millions of women's tights made their way from the „VEB Esda Thalheim“ production facility in the GDR women's prison Hoheneck to the ALDI supermarket shelves. They were sold in the budget segment under the names „Iris“ in northern and „Sayonara“ in southern Germany.

The women, often imprisoned for political reasons, worked under inhumane conditions.

ALDI has committed itself to fair working conditions and employee rights in its Code of Conduct. The company however wants nothing to do with the shadows of the past.

Despite solid evidence, ALDI is not willing to reach out to the victims of forced labor in GDR prisons.

This is a slap in the face to those who had to toil for the profits of the company. Does this meet ALDI's understanding of fairness and sustainability?

ALDI must confront its past
and reach out to the victims!

#againstforcedlabor

   uokgev  @uokgnews

more information at www.uokg.de

Copyright UOKG e.V. Ruschestr. 103 10365 Berlin